Inside my chest I felt my heart snap into two pieces

which floated apart.

I put out my hand

to touch his.

He moved back.

I DON'T want to be sexual with you, he said.

YES,

I said as I began to

REMOVE

my

CLOTHES.

Everything I know about LOVE and its necessities

I learned in that one moment

when I found myself

Soul is the place,

stretched like a surface of millstone grit between body and mind,

where such necessity grinds itself out.

Soul is what I kept watch on all that night.

Law stayed with me.

We lay on top of the covers

as if it weren't really a night of sleep and time caressing and singing to one another in our

made-up language

like the children we used to be.

That was a night that centred Heaven and Hell.

The end.
